President's Perspective

As we prepare to flip the calendar from January to February, we will hopefully see a reduction in one of the challenging numbers we have faced during the start of this semester – a rise in coronavirus cases within the Tusculum family.

I encourage all of you to remain vigilant about protecting yourself during this period when the omicron variant is producing a resurgence of cases across the nation. The coronavirus continues to be a factor in our everyday lives, so we need to be diligent about practicing commonsense measures such as washing our hands and wearing face coverings indoors.

Hopefully, this variant will soon fade, and we will begin to see a permanent drop in the numbers. Taking good care of yourself, however, will always serve you well.

I am also aware some Tusculum family members are experiencing other illnesses with themselves and their families. A few have also unfortunately had family members pass. The rest of the Tusculum family and I grieve for you and pray that you will experience comfort and peace. I urge you to lean on the Lord and us as a source of solace and strength to help you.

In time, the sun will shine for you, and the memories you hold dear will not only sustain you but also inspire you in the future.

Dr. Scott Hummel
President

Word of the Week

“Cast all your anxiety on Him because He cares for you.” – 1 Peter 5:7 NIV

Last week, Jalia Arnwine, a graduate student and guard for the women's basketball team, added one more accomplishment to her impressive Tusculum resume when she notched her 1,000th point in a game against Anderson University. Arnwine has also made a difference off the court, playing an integral role in the creation of the African American studies minor and implementation of one of its courses – Race and Ethnic Relations – and helping lead the development of the Black Student Union. She received the President's Award in May when she graduated with her bachelor's degree in criminal justice. Photo from the Office of Athletic Communications

Coronavirus update

Thirty-one students and five employees are positive. Seventy-nine percent of employees and 28 percent of students are protected.

All individuals must wear face coverings indoors in our buildings when physical distancing cannot be guaranteed. Faculty and staff members who are alone in their office are not required to wear a face covering, but they should have one with them at all times. We look forward to conditions improving with the coronavirus so we can remove this face covering requirement.

Residential households in the United States can order one set of four free at-home coronavirus tests. The tests will be delivered by the U.S. Postal Service. To learn more, please visit <https://special.usps.com/testkits>.

We urge all Tusculum family members to complete the form at the following links about your status to help us successfully navigate the global coronavirus pandemic.

W-2 forms available at McCormick until the afternoon

Tusculum employees who are eligible to receive a W-2 from the university for the 2021 tax return can collect theirs from Nicki Ellenburg, payroll specialist, until 2 p.m. today.

The university will send the W-2 form by U.S. Mail to anyone who does not arrive by that time.

Ellenburg's office is located in McCormick Hall.

Student responses to survey needed

As we have shared with via individual email and The Pioneer Press, Tusculum University is developing a strategic plan, grounded in our mission, that will guide our institution. This is an important document, and student input is vital to the success of this initiative.

To assist the steering committee overseeing the development of the strategic plan, we have developed the following student satisfaction survey from HEDS: <https://tinyurl.com/tuscstusat>. We ask students to take a few minutes to complete the survey

We thank students for agreeing to participate! This survey asks how satisfied students are with different parts of their experience at Tusculum. It should take 5-10 minutes to complete. We want to know more about your experience so we can ensure we are needs most effectively.

Survey results will be shared with a handful of people at Tusculum who work to help students succeed and improve the institution. Anyone who has access to students' responses is legally obligated to keep them confidential.

African American traveling museum coming to Tusculum

Student Support Services and the Office of Student Affairs will sponsor Sankofa, an African American traveling museum, from noon-5 p.m. Wednesday, Feb. 2, in the Old Gym.

This is the second time Sankofa has come to Tusculum, and we encourage all Tusculum family members to visit this fascinating museum. Visitors also have an opportunity to read information about African American history.

Angela Jennings has run the museum since 1995.

As we prepare to enter Black History Month, we encourage you to spend time learning more about the African American experience.

Auditions this week for “School House Rock Live, JR”!

They were entertaining educational pieces when they aired in the midst of Saturday morning cartoon shows in the 1970s, and now Tusculum is bringing them to the Behan Arena Theatre!

“School House Rock” featured classic songs such as “I’m Just a Bill” and “Conjunction Junction” in multiple segments as a neat way to reinforce and supplement many lessons young students learned in the classroom. These great short stories will once again take the spotlight in the spring when Theatre-at-Tusculum presents “School House Rock Live, JR.”

Theatre-at-Tusculum will hold auditions for performers Tuesday, Feb. 1, and Wednesday, Feb. 2 in the Behan. Children ages 8-17 are invited to demonstrate their skill and potentially secure a place in the show. Registration is at 5:30 p.m., with auditions starting at 6 p.m. Participants do not need to prepare any audition pieces.

Aspirants should come either Monday or Tuesday, with possible callbacks Thursday, Feb. 3.

Performance dates are April 21, 22, 24, 28, 29 and 30 and May 1.

For more information, please email Jennifer Hollowell, director of Tusculum's Center for the Arts, at jhollowell@tusculum.edu.

Work underway on pedestrian enhancements

The university is partnering with the City of Tusculum to make improvements for pedestrians walking between the Nichols Tennis Center and the Scott M. Niswonger Commons as part of our commitment to safety on campus.

The university is installing sidewalks on the Niswonger side of Shiloh Road to support students who walk to the other side of Shiloh at the crosswalk after coming from the Indoor Practice Facility parking lot and athletic fields in that part of campus.

In addition, the university will extend a sidewalk from the steps near the tennis courts that will bring pedestrians to the asphalt basketball courts and the crosswalk near Katherine Hall and the beach volleyball courts. To enhance safety, the university will install fencing and bushes on the tennis courts side of Shiloh to ensure people do not cross Shiloh except at a crosswalk.

The city will assist by enhancing the crosswalk from the IPF parking lot and installing flashing signs to warn motorists a pedestrian is crossing Shiloh. The pedestrian will activate the signal by pushing a button.

Tusculum is pleased to undertake this work to assist our students who walk in that area.

Reminder about study abroad opportunity for students

The deadline for sophomores and juniors to apply for the Irish American Scholars program through the Association of Presbyterian Colleges and Universities is quickly approaching.

- Belfast Metropolitan College
- Queens University
- St. Mary's University College
- Stranmillis University College
- Ulster University

Sophomore and juniors at participating APCU schools, such as Tusculum, can apply to study in Northern Ireland in the following academic year. Applicants must have a minimum GPA of 3.2 and submit an application packet prior to Thursday, Feb. 10.

Business Office leader selected at GEM recipient for January

Carrie Maggert, director of financial services and operations and a Tusculum alumna, is a dedicated member of the Tusculum family. She is a well-known leader at the university, and her hard work to advance Tusculum has earned her a new distinction – President’s GEM Award recipient for January.

Dr. Hummel announced Maggert as the winner during the President’s Coffee Friday, Jan. 28. She succeeds Nicole Rader, director of alumni engagement and special events, who was selected for December.

Here are some of the comments people made about her.

“Carrie has dedicated 20 exceptional years of service to the institution and provides a perfect example of the type of individual Tusculum is so proud to call an alum. She always goes above and beyond expectations and always has the institution’s best interests at heart.”

A couple of specific examples of her efforts on Tusculum’s behalf are the conversion to Anthology and her work with the facilities management team and Chartwells, Tusculum’s food service provider.

“She has been instrumental in the conversion process from Colleague to Anthology, and is responsible for getting into place the business side of the student system. She has worked tireless hours and burned the midnight oil more than she will probably admit. She continues to work on that project to perfect the system for the benefit of our students and the institution with improved electronic features. Carrie also works very closely with our facilities department and Chartwells to enhance our campus infrastructure and to improve services to our students.”

And here is another comment:

“She is always working long hours and always willing to help others. She is a huge asset and very deserving of this award.”

Maggert earned a Bachelor of Science in organizational management, with a concentration in human resources, in 2002 and a Master of Business Administration in 2020, both from Tusculum.

Faculty and staff members can submit nominations for the February GEM Award until Wednesday, Feb. 23, via this short form. Dr. Hummel will announce the recipient at the President’s Coffee Friday, Feb. 25.
